

The American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology (ACOG), Society of Maternal Fetal Medicine (SMFM), American Society of Reproductive Medicine (ASRM) and CDC recommend that pregnant women, breast feeding women and women who are considering pregnancy receive the Covid vaccine.

At Alliance, we support the use of Covid vaccine for all of our patients. We can discuss with you at your next appointment the use of vaccines in pregnancy and lactation as well as your risk of infection.

Alliance does not provide Covid vaccine exemption for people who are pregnant, breast feeding or trying for pregnancy.

Society for Maternal Fetal Medicine:

https://s3.amazonaws.com/cdn.smfm.org/media/3089/Provider Considerations for Engaging in COVID Vaccination Considerations 8-23-21.pdf

American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology:

<https://www.acog.org/clinical/clinical-guidance/practice-advisory/articles/2020/12/covid-19-vaccination-considerations-for-obstetric-gynecologic-care>

American Society of Reproductive Medicine:

<https://www.asrm.org/news-and-publications/news-and-research/press-releases-and-bulletins/new-study-reveals-covid-vaccine-does-not-cause-female-sterility/>